Garth

I'd plead for the right to read out the email that I've sent you this morning, if I'm mentioned publicly

Then the brethren can judge

Is that OK?

Dear Lance

Certainly feel compassionate towards and sorry for you and your family. I feel you are putting yourself through totally unnecessary pressure while you don't face up to the simple issues raised.

I think you should come out this morning, you won't be asked or expected to speak, in fact it would be best to not speak.

I would be glad to support you by taking an interest in your medical welfare especially as being your brother I am marked by similar traits. I am also strong willed finding it difficult to admit it simply when I am wrong. However up until now you have maintained that the doctors say there is nothing wrong with you. Could you share their medical reports with me please so I can better understand your medical condition?

Praying much for you and trust you will find the grace to take low ground, our way out is to rely on the One who took the blame and follow Him as our model and guide.

With very much love.

Best Regards,

Garth Christie

Garth,

Can I plead for some compassion?

If I'm ill in the mind, it hardly seems fair to rebuke me a 2nd time publicly.

If you can see it, I construe actions like this to be detrimental to my health and wellbeing. I think that my psychiatric team would agree with this.

That's why I'm pleading for leniency

I think I'll be best to hold myself away if you have to do it

Then you can tell me all about it afterwards

I'd appreciate you coming down to see my doctor, as already mentioned

That may help you to understand my condition better
